

Introduction

Overview

Consignment return happens after consignment issue. i.e customer can return Consignment product, the product are issued to customer by Consignment issue process

Business Case

The consignment return process involves the return of consignment goods to your company. The customer can return the consignment stock due to various reasons such as defect in the goods or non-sale of stock. When the customer returns the consignment goods to your warehouse without using them, it results in a reduction in your consignment stock and an increase in your warehouse stock. When the customer returns the goods after they are used or after consignment invoicing, this is processed like the usual customer return.
