

Introduction

The process of creating invoices for specific requests is a critical component of efficient business operations. This involves generating invoices tailored to a designated request type, with optional parameters like request group and category for the business partner. Additionally, if the product used for invoicing is not explicitly defined, the system automatically defaults to the product specified in the predefined parameters. This streamlined approach ensures accuracy and flexibility in the invoicing process, meeting the unique requirements of various business scenarios.

Business process

In a service-oriented company, clients regularly submit requests for specific types of services. To streamline the invoicing process, the company employs a system that creates invoices tailored to each request type.
